Terms of Service: Privacy Policy: Top Pcmac Reviews Well I think PugQueen1 (Pcmac user) I just got this app and I don't like it anymore. I installed this app because I've seen adds quite often, and it said that the app checked how much sense the sentence made. I don't really need any help with grammar, but I'd love to feature sentence control for the most effective way to write sentences and get my point across. But I found out you had to pay for the only job I wanted. Some people would be fine with that, but at all adds, they said it was completely free. I don't think I like apps or people who lie to me. Moreover, it is not so that you have to pay only $2 and never pay again. You have to pay around $8 a month! I also don't like having to give this app full access to what I'm writing, but it wasn't a huge deal because I don't really type very important personal information, but it still makes me feel uncomfortable. I am writing a book on my iPad with a hardware keyboard (this is in my case that I bought for iPad). even if he refuses to work with it and I do not like typing with lowercase letters when I could use a keyboard that is easier to type. If you don't mind any of this, please get the app. Grammatical advice always makes sense, but I will remove this application immediately. It's a no-brainer... get it! Not like not for me, but for sure! Ha! JoshieeeeEP (Pcmac user) I have this app because my husband has it downloaded on his laptop and I love it. I'm pretty bad at grammar, so this app was a lifesaver. However, when I downloaded it for my iPad; which I have a laptop keyboard case thing on it, well the app pretty much didn't like the keyboard case. He told me to turn it off and use the keyboard that the app provides. Which is the touch screen option, and it's totally inconvenient when you have to enter long 24-page paper. I also hate the fact that after turning on the Grammarly keyboard, you get another thing that pops up and says: allow full access. Anyway, I'm so glad they gave the option instead of just having full access. But still, I'm against full access, because if you give them full access, you basically sign your life and rights. They will tell you that any information you enter or previously enter, such as credit card information and address, will be collected and stored in their personal database. And that's not all, but I prefer not to sit here and say it for you (ba-da-ting). It didn't happen here- here-Captain. So I installed and 5 minutes later deleted. You can try it longer if you want, but do it at your own risk! I'll tell my husband grammatically about you. I wish this new Spanish Sarito about Sara (Pcmac user) I think it's great. He's doing his job. My only comment is that since I write Spanglish occasionally to my family in Cuba autocorrect loses and just replaces every word. It's a constant battle. Other than that it works amazing! Sometimes it's better to stop obsessing over miniature flaws and focus on what's really important. Personally, I feel like Hipócrata because I'm here and I give my opinion when I don't know anything about apps or technologies. I just care, and every time I write and raise my voice, I take it. Personally, who cares what people say. Most of the time what they are lying to someone down. Believe me when I tell you that if you don't care about people who don't stress about it. The reason you're important is why no one stops. People can't be happy for others. It's all right, leave me alone. Now, stop taking in all the comments and negativity and BULL. Open your eyes, darling. PS. I wish there was an overview of the correct and less misleading search tool. Maria R. I absolutely love it! But... There are smaller things I'd like to carve. First, I'm a brand new user on my iPhone, but I use Grammarly a lot on my laptop. It's not the best when typing on an iPhone, so I thought, 'let's use this app that I have on my laptop.' so I downloaded the app. I opened my Documents which is where I would probably write write and then I started using it. I like to use a lot of apostrophes, as well as many quotes. But it looks like if you try to give a sentence, they'll face it the wrong way. Here's an example: Sally slipped her pale hand over a smooth marble slab without knowing what she was getting into. At the beginning, the first quotation marks are incorrect. I know you may not mind, reader, but it bothers me very much. I'm a person who get upset when little things aren't right. Please fix it as I really like Grammarly, but I can't stand this problem. It happens when I use apostrophes. For example: On the wall or read: 'Nice try, but you won't beat me, oh, I forgot to mention my beloved sister?' See how an apostrophe does it? That's what bothers me. Fix it, please. Thank you for reading my long review. Again, it bothers me so much that I would have to remove this application on my phone, but not on my laptop. Thank you so much, Potato. Potatoes.
